Dear Hans,

Having received your letter, I'm more than delighted to write back to give my ideas, hoping that they may help to put your marvelous plan into reality.

Firstly, it's highly recommended to record the video in time line like choosing short pieces from having classes to after-class activities, which can provide a brief but colorful image of our campus life on the whole. What's more, you may also focus on our daily quiz, during which the characteristic intense atmosphere is fully displayed. Besides, random interviewing ^{excerpts} ~~excerpts~~ may come as a highlight, adding much spice to the video and offer a special viewpoint from ~~all~~ Chinese students.

Above are my advice and I do hope that the video will turn out to be a true success. Eagerly looking forward to the outcome!

第二节 (满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料, 根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段, 使之构成一篇完整的短文。

Ballet was a way of life in Kelly's family. Her elder sister Serena was now dancing at a top college. Though Kelly's mom always wanted her to follow in her sister's footsteps and Kelly herself was good at ballet, her love for ballet had faded years before, and she was eager for a new challenge.

One day at school, as Kelly left the dance studio, she walked past the gym, fascinated by boxers (拳击手) training inside the boxing ring. She was deeply impressed by how hard they hit and how fast they moved. In fact, she'd long been attracted to boxing.

She pulled a piece of paper from her backpack. On the familiar Oakwood High School Club Sign-up Sheet was the phrase: BOXING CLUB TRYOUT (选拔). That was what Kelly really wanted to do. She knew her mom had high expectations for her when it came to ballet. Tired of trying to keep up with her sister, Kelly was ready to carve her own path.

The next day, she gathered her courage and told Serena about her new passion. At first, Serena didn't understand and thought she was just joking. But when she saw Kelly was serious, she replied, "You know Mom wants you to be a ballet dancer, right? Besides, boxing is only for boys, and you're so good at ballet. Lean into your strength, Kelly?"

"But this is where I want to put my strength," Kelly insisted, "and what exactly does 'only for boys' mean, anyway? Boxing is a sport for everyone!"

Gradually, touched by her determination and passion, Serena began to understand and support her. Kelly could feel it. Her sister was going to respect her decision, no matter what. But that was nothing compared to the preparations for the tryout, where she was required to show her footwork and punching (击打) abilities with other candidates. Boxing didn't come natural to Kelly, but she had made up her mind to stick with her choice.

Then Kelly began her training for the tryout, keeping it a secret from her mom.

The following Monday, results of the boxing tryout were posted.

Then Kelly began her training, keeping it a secret from her mom. Every day after school, Kelly dashed to the boxing gym, occupying herself with the intense training. Stretching legs, practicing her footwork and improving endurance had become the bittersweet routine of her life. Even when she was made fun of by boys in the gym, she bit her lip tightly and continued her training. Finally, the tryout came. Extremely nervous though, she stepped into the boxing ring, moved fast and punched hard to the surprise of other candidates. After the tryout, Kelly left the gym confidently, knowing she did her best.

The following Monday, results of the boxing tryout were posted. To her delight, Kelly found her name on the list. Thrilled, she shared the news with Serena, both ready to reveal the secret to their mom. At dinner that day, Kelly gathered her courage and said to her mom, "I'm sorry, mom. I've made the boxing team and I'm ready to carve my own path." At first, a flicker of disbelief and shock crossed her mom's face, but after a long, heart-to-heart talk, she gave Kelly a bear hug and whispered softly, "I'm so proud of you for being yourself."

Then Kelly began her training for the tryout, keeping it a secret from her mom. She practised footwork and punching day in and day out and ended up being soaking through by sweat. Perceiving her exhausted look, Mom would praised her for her hard work in Ballet. Everytime when this happened, Kelly would have her nerves tightened and slowly let out a vague response. Despite of the nervousness when confronting her Mom, Kelly was pervaded by her passion for boxing, worn out but content. Finally, the big day came. It was her continuous efforts that sharpen her skills of boxing, thereby leading to her outstanding performance in the tryout. Engulfed by joy, she was looking forward to the result.

The following Monday, results of the boxing tryout were posted. Kelly's name was clearly listed on — she had managed to pass the tryout! Occupied by excitement, she ultimately made up her mind to confess the truth to her Mom. Hearing her words, Mom's eyebrows knitted, flame of fury dancing in her eyes. "Kelly, you know..." Mom's words were interrupted by Serena's "Mom, Kelly has the right to choose her own path." Feeling sister's support, Kelly mustered all her courage to explain her passion for boxing. Gradually, the fierce look on Mom's face softened into a supportive smile. The experience has dawned on Kelly that it's essential to stick to your choice and embark your own journey of life.

Compared with other well-trained candidates perfectly finishing the task, Kelly, a beginner could hardly complete a set of simple actions. Tired and a bit frustrated as she was, she always could cheer herself up at the thought of how hard the boxers hit and how fast and flexibly they moved.
